George McBean George McBean (1791 – 28 May 1843) was an English actor. Born in Middlesex, the son of John McBean, he was intended for the medical profession. At the age of 21 he obtained an engagement at Drury Lane Theatre, as an understudy to Edmund Kean. In 1811 he replaced Kean as the representative of the "Spirit of the Age" in the burletta, Glen, or Naiads and Fairies; and in 1814 Kean left the stage for the United States. McBean then became a popular performer, playing at the Haymarket Theatre (his first appearance there being in Shakespeare's Hamlet), at Drury Lane, and the Covent Garden Theatre. He left the stage in 1822 and became a manager. He died in Paris. This study was aimed at evaluating the psychometric characteristics of the Brazilian version of the Minnesota Living with Heart Failure Questionnaire (MLHFQ). This is a self-applied questionnaire that assesses the functional, physical, mental and social well-being of patients with heart failure (HF). The study consisted of five stages: 1) translation, semantic validation and cross-cultural adaptation of the original version of the questionnaire; 2) validation of the adapted version of the instrument using the original version; 3) assessment of its psychometric properties; 4) application of the MLHFQ in a sample of Brazilian patients with HF; and 5) comparison of the questionnaire results with the results of the original version. The correlation and intra-class correlation coefficients, mean and standard deviation, item internal consistency, items' item-total correlation, and the nonparametric Wilcoxon and Mann-Whitney tests were used for the statistical analysis. The Brazilian version of the MLHFQ showed adequate psychometric properties, and this version shows a score distribution, factor structure and internal consistency similar to the original version. Thus, the Brazilian version of the MLHFQ may be considered valid and reliable for the assessment of health-related quality of life in HF. Ask HN: Developers for hire using Apache License v2 -

What's New in the Photoshop 2022 (version 23)?

The untimely death of Justice Antonin Scalia has sparked a lively debate within the halls of Congress over whether or not his successor on the Supreme Court will be confirmed. The Democrats, who hold a majority in the Senate, have been eager to make this debate a filibuster-proof, do-or-die confirmation vote. Republicans, meanwhile, have vowed to block any such move. An article in the Washington Post quotes one Republican senator as saying that "if any of those horrible, scary, female, left-wing people are going to upend this administration, we're going to do everything we can to stop them." It was a direct response to the statement from Warren's office on Monday morning about the president's ability to make nominations. "Because the American people deserve a Supreme Court that is free from political influence, no president can make a range of important nominations without the Senate's advice and consent." Evers said. Republicans are now saying that they will do everything they can to prevent the upcoming elections from having an effect on this Supreme Court. "Here's my message to members of the United States Senate: You have a big job to do," Oklahoma GOP senator Jim Inhofe said on Tuesday. "But I hope you won't do it before September." The Senate Republicans also have a backup plan if that strategy fails. Instead of just doing this and getting a change on the Supreme Court, they now can also wait until after the November elections to make a change. This would almost certainly take the seat away from Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, who has been a great voice on issues such as women's rights.// Copyright (c) Lawrence Livermore National Security, LLC and other VisIt // Project developers.
